after persuading him to retire. He was arrested soon after.

The accident occurred at 10:30 o'clock, and two physicians worked over him with applications of electricity without being able to restore him to consciousness.

At 1:30 o'clock he was removed from the theatre to the Hotel Candee. Immediately after Rordan was knocked out, Joseph Dunfee, the local sparrer, whose blow killed Donovan on Aug. 5, put on the gloves for a two-round bout with Fitzsimmons. In the second round Dunfee landed a right-hand blow on the gloves for a two-round bout with Fitzsimmons. In the second round Dunfee landed a right-hand blow on the gloves for a two-round bout with Fitzsimmons.

The injured man breathed his last at 1:30 o'clock this morning. After 3 o'clock he began to sink rapidly, respiration growing fainter with every minute, until finally, with a few spasmodic convulsions, he died. The physicians, a few members of the company and Mrs. Fitzsimmons were present. It is claimed that Rordan concealed his real condition from the stage manager, who would have revealed his appearance had he known it.

"CON" RORDAN.

He then returned to Australia and met Billy Cole at Melbourne, defeating him in eight seconds. The shortest fight on record. He next defeated George Bloomfield in three rounds; George Langdon in three rounds; John Wilson in two rounds; B. Gowan in five rounds, and Tom Frake twice in three and four rounds respectively.

The news of Rordan's death was conveyed to Fitzsimmons at Police Headquarters by "Yank" Sullivan and Joe Dunfee. Sullivan entered the room first and in as quiet a way as possible said: "Bob, Con is dead. He died despite all the efforts that were made for him by the doctors, about five minutes ago."

Fitzsimmons gave a start in his chair. "You don't mean to say he is really dead? I can't believe it. It does not seem possible."

"Yes, Bob, he died without once regaining consciousness, and it cannot be helped."

Fitz slowly settled back in his chair. His face had a gloomy expression, and after gazing about the room crowded with his friends, he said:

"I suppose that for this I cannot pay to-night. It was not my fault, as you all well know, but notwithstanding this fact, it will give me considerable trouble. Rordan, when he came on the stage, was under the influence of liquor. In my opinion, if the play had been prolonged ten minutes more he would have fallen behind the scenes without my striking him at all."

"I can't really believe that the man is truly dead. What reason could I have for hitting my sparring partner a powerful blow? Just a bluff effect. Fitzsimmons gave a hearty effect. Fitzsimmons was not caused by my blow, but that he was filled with liquor and in no fit condition to enter a sparring ring."

Fitz then asked to be told exactly how Rordan died. It is impossible to conjecture just what effect Fitzsimmons' misfortune will have. He will probably be admitted to bail, and friends stand ready to put up any amount.

The case will go to the Grand Jury and Fitz will doubtless be indicted for manslaughter.

Fitzsimmons was admitted to bail this morning in the sum of $1000.

Fitzsimmons described the occurrence in this way:

"When he fell to his knees, I did not think that I had hurt him, and supposed he only wanted to escape punishment."

"We had only been at it a few minutes, when I meant to knock him on the right cheek with the back of my right hand. It was merely a smart tap, and could not have more than stunned him. He made one or two faints at me, then I was surprised to see him put up his hands and say: 'Call time.' It was quite a while before I realized how bad he was."

After returning to America Joe McLaughlin endeavored to stop Rordan at San Francisco on Aug. 11, 1913, and the contest ended in a four-round draw.

At the Golden Gate Athletic Club of San Francisco he met Australian Billy Smith, and was defeated by him in eighteen rounds. He was then engaged by Peter Jackson as a sparring partner, and went to England with him, but soon returned to this country.

Later he was matched by the Ormonde Club, of London, to meet Jack Slavin, and on June 18, 1912, he was beaten by him in nineteen rounds. Since that time he has not engaged in any pugilistic contest.

When in this city Rordan stopped with a friend, Con Clark, bartender in J. J. Walsh's saloon, at Horatio street and Greenwich avenue.

An "Evening World" reporter gave Clark the first news of Rordan's death this morning.

Clark was much surprised and deeply affected. He said that the pugilist had been from Rordan's dated yesterday at Syracuse. In it the pugilist said he had been drinking heavily for three days, but intended bracing up and stopping the habit altogether.

A TREATY WITH JAPAN.

New Convention with Nippon New Ready for Signature.

Japanese Courts to Try Foreigners at Treaty Ports.

Immigration into the United States to Be Restricted.

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The new treaty between the United States and Japan has been concluded in all its essential features, and it remains only to determine minor details and phraseology. The instrument has not yet been formally signed, and its actual execution may be delayed some days. The great question involved are those dealing with the treaty ports and with immigration of Japanese to the United States.

As to the former, the Japanese feel that their judicial system is now conducted on such modern and enlightened lines that it can be safely trusted in the trial of cases arising at the treaty ports of Japan, in which Americans are parties. Heretofore the American Consular courts in Japan have tried these cases.

There is reason to believe that Japan desires will be recognized in the new treaty. But as Japan wishes all countries to recognize this new judicial system at the same time, the treaty with this country will be the same as that recently concluded with Great Britain, providing that the jurisdiction of Japanese courts over treaty ports will begin several years hence, probably 1899.

As to the immigration of Japanese to the United States, recent official advice from Japan states that the Government will consent to any fair restriction this country wishes to impose. The Japanese are said to have no anxiety to emigrate to this country in large numbers.

Aside from these special features, the chief significance of the new treaty will be in American recognition of Japan as a nation of equal status with the United States. Nothing but the ratification of the treaty in Japan will entitle it to the respect and privileges of other first-class powers.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 17.—The Japanese attack on Port Arthur was arranged to be made mainly by land, the navy rendering slight assistance. The result of the attack is expected to be known on Monday.

ANXIOUS TO TELL.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy Made Her Well. It Makes One Feel Like Another Person. Gives Health and Strength.

Here is an interesting and thrilling letter from a young and beautiful woman, Miss Nellie B. Bigelow, of 88 North street, Pittsfield, Mass.

"I am anxious that everybody should know my experience," she says. "Last winter I began to have pains in my head and neck. Great bunches appeared on my head, and wherever the pains were it would swell up tremendously. The pains were constant and terrible, and extended all over my head."

"I was fearfully nervous, and always worrying about something. I could not sleep nights, and suffered terribly from this. I thought I should lose my reason. I had no sleep, and my digestion was terrible. Sometimes the pains were very sharp and then they were dull and cutting."

"Sometimes there would be four or five bunches at once over my eyes, back of my ears, and on my head, then all at once they were gone, but whatever they were, when the swelling went down the place would be sore. I could not walk because it jarred my head so. I had a good meal and went to bed, and the next morning I was all right."

"I doctored with two different doctors and all kinds of medicines and ointments, but nothing did me any good. For thirteen weeks I suffered everything with the pain in my head. Finally I had all my upper teeth taken out, but after that was worse than before. I had to use morphine constantly. I tried everything I heard of or read of, but without benefit."

"At last a friend recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Oh! that I had taken a walk with him."
